[redacted]
On returning from a rather long trip overseas,
I found your very interesting letter of September 9.

You address an issue which has been of high interest to me since [redacted] first brought to my attention, when I was a member of PFIAB, the implications of our expensive high technology capabilities and quick, dirty and cheap ones which give our adversaries additional flexibility.

You can be sure that I will use your cogent presentation of the possibilities as a basis for taking a close look.

Yours,

William J. Casey
